NUMBER 50

Editorial Correspondence.

RICHMOND, Ky., Sept. 1, 1880.

On the morning of the 23d of August I took the east-bound train for Midway, from which place I was soon carried to distant from the railroad about $7\frac{1}{2}$ miles. It was County Court-day, and the town was literally packed with people. Everybody was busy and in a good humor. Large numbers of fat and feeding cattle were on the market, and auctioneers had all they could do.

I learn that Versailles has a population of 2,000, and judge from appearances, that they are a live people. There are some evidences of thrift here, and I have no doubt but that it is a pleasant little place.

I remained here but a short time, going back to

on the afternoon stage. The people here, 1,000 in number, claim that their prospects for growth and prosperity are good. Some nice buildings have recently been erected here, and more are in contemplation. There is a stage line from here to Versailles—two, I should have said, for there is lively competition—making two round trips daily (Sunday excepted) between these points. Mr. W. G. Chelf, the gentleman who runs a stage line from Frankfort to Harrodsburg, carries the mail and Adams Express over this line. He has a nice new stage coach, accommodating employes, and has reduced the fare to the small sum of twenty-five cents for each way. With this reduction in fare the travel has greatly increased.

After spending the afternoon here I took the evening train for Lexington, changed cars at Cincinnati Southern Crossing, where I met Ed. Grant, formerly of Frankfort, who is fireman on the C. S. R. R. At his solicitation I got aboard the locomotive, and had a delightful ride to Nicholasville. Ed is working hard and doing well. He is much pleased with his situation.

Arriving at Nicholasville I found it impossible to procure a room in the town, and so had to sleep on a cot, so called, in the parlor of the Veranda Hotel. On Tuesday morning I went to the court-house, where I saw Jas. H. Arnold, the murderer of Robt. E. Little, his wife, the widow of the murdered man, Mrs. Robt. E. Little, and such an array of legal talent as is seldom witnessed in the same house at the same time. I spent the forenoon here, after which I left for the county seat of Garrard county, where I arrived about 3 o'clock p.m., in company with T. B. Demaree, Grand Worthy Chief Templar, of the I. O. G. T. of Kentucky. I went in the evening and heard him deliver a good temperance lecture, and in the morning I saw the town.

The late census returns show that this place has a population of 1,200. The town is a very old one, and its age has long ago begun to tell on it. Mr. Kinnaird, cashier of the First National Bank here, who, by the way, is an exceedingly agreeable gentleman, has a very fine banking building, and is doing all the business he can well attend to. Other business men seem to be doing moderately well. A very creditable court-house adorns the public square, but the church buildings reflect no credit on the town. They are small, and few, and quite ancient in appearance. I had the pleasure of meeting here Mrs. Eugenia Dunlap Potts, Kentucky's poetess, of whom Kentucky may well be proud.

was the next place I visited. I was most agreeably disappointed in this place. I had expected to find a companion town to Lancaster, but the spirit of progress and enterprise is everywhere visible here. The town has a population of 1,300, and it is still growing. The court-house is a very nice building, near which has recently been erected a $12,000 jail. The county has bought a block of buildings near the court-house and had them torn down so as to enlarge and beautify the court-house yard. The members of the Christian Church at this place are erecting an elegant church building; four or five large brick stores are being built; two or three more business houses, a large livery stable and several elegant residences will be commenced shortly, and the young men of the town have formed a stock company and now have in process of erection a $6,000 town hall. How is that for public spirit?

There is a large and prosperous female college here, the buildings and grounds of which are very handsome. A large majority of the residences are tasteful and costly. Many beautiful cottages and flower yards ornament the town. Here, perhaps, is the only place in the State where may be found a female office-holder, except the State Librarian. The Deputy County Clerk is a lady. She holds the office by virtue of a special act of the Legislature.

Thanking Mr. Wallace Varnon for his kindness to me during my stay here, I leave Stanford for the county seat of Washington county, which I reach by means of a stage from Lebanon—a pleasant drive of nine miles. The late census gives Springfield a population of 700. A good country surrounds the town, and a very fair business is done here. There is a good court-house here, five or six nice business houses, and two or three very fine dwelling houses. Leaving here I returned to a station on the Knoxville branch of the L. N. & G. S. R. R. It has a population of 2,000, and is a very fine business point. The business houses on Main street have quite a city-like appearance, a large new brick hotel adding much to this portion of the town. The court-house is a little old "rattle trap," not fit even for a cross roads village school-house in the mountains.

Remaining here but a few hours, I proceeded to

on the C. & O. R. R., twenty miles south of Lebanon. It is a little town—700 inhabitants—but does a large business. It is the shipping point for four or five counties near here. Several houses are being built here, and several more will be commenced shortly. Taylor county, of which this is the county seat, is, and has been for two years, without a sheriff. There is some trouble about the collection of the railroad taxes in this county, and it being considered a dangerous undertaking, no person can be found who wants the office of sheriff. There is no small amount of enterprise here and Campbellsville is in a very fair way of being a good sized town before many years shall have passed.

GREENSBURG,

the county seat of Green county, and the present southern terminus of the C. & O. R. R., was the next place I visited. This is one of the oldest towns in the State, in fact as in appearance. Comparatively little business is done here. All the roads leading into the place are terribly bad, and the tide of trade that properly belongs here is carried to Campbellsville over good turnpikes.

This county also has its troubles about railroad taxes, and in consequence it is without a sheriff as well as Taylor county. The people are industrious, frugal and moderately prosperous. Society here is said to be far above the average—indeed the society of Greensburg is the greatest boast of its people. The town has a population of 650, nearly half of whom are of the colored persuasion.

In company with Mr. Buckner Taylor, to whom I hereby return my thanks for his kindness to me, I went to on Sunday and spent the day. I found one of the prettiest and most prosperous little inland towns I have yet seen. There are two large female colleges here, many beautiful homes and many good, sociable people. The last census gives this town 645 inhabitants, only three of whom are colored. There is not an inch of ground in Columbia owned by colored people, nor is there a colored church in the town.

I had the pleasure of meeting Dr. B. T. Wood, formerly Assistant Surgeon in charge at the Feeble-minded Institute, who has permanently located here for the purpose of practicing his profession. I am told that his prospects for soon obtaining a lucrative practice are flattering. The Doctor inquired about his host of friends in Frankfort, and particularly of a couple of ladies, to whom he desires me to give his "love." A young lady in Greensburg informed me that the Doctor (this is strictly confidential) is "mortgaged" to a young lady in Lebanon, which will be sorry news to some of the Frankfort girls.

Returning to Greensburg I made a short stay, and then left for Somerset, but failing to connect with the south bound train on the C. S. R. R. at Danville Junction, I went on to RICHMOND.

I rather expected to see a pretty place on my arrival here, but was wholly unprepared for the beauty and elegance and business prosperity that characterizes it. I have never seen town in Kentucky that will bear comparison with this place. It has a population of 3,000, but looks and behaves like a town ten times its size. Its business houses are large and imposing in appearance and its residences are elegant, tasteful and costly. Business flourishes here, and everybody seems to be in a prosperous condition. Evidences of wealth and culture and refinement meet the eye at every turn, and a visitor to this place feels that "surely this is God's own favored country."

I had the pleasure of meeting Gov. McCreary here, to whom I am indebted, and hereby return thanks, for courtesies shown me by him. No truer nor more obliging gentleman than he can be found in this broad Commonwealth. Long may he live and prosper.

I also had the pleasure of meeting Hon. Curtis F. Burnham, with whom I spent a part of a most pleasant evening in his own elegant home. He is another of nature's noblemen with whom I am proud to have met.

I could say much in praise of Richmond and the country surrounding it, but this letter is already too long, and so I close

FRANKFORT, SEPTEMBER 4, 1880.

If your ROUNDABOUT is marked on the first page with a red X it indicates that your subscription has expired and must be renewed before you receive another paper.

The next session of Fall Academy, Mrs. Agnes Franklin, Principal, begins next Monday. All the pupils should attend the first day.

As neat a piece of work as we have ever seen is a cross of fancy scroll work sawed out by Mr. Chas. Keller, at Mr. P. Selbert's. It is of finely polished white holly wood, and the parts are so delicate and neatly cut that when placed on a dark background and framed it was more like an engraving than anything else, being much prettier than the chromos of floral crosses, that are so numerous now-a-days.

A negro man employed at R. N. Archer & Co.'s saw-mill as a night hand was sitting down asleep Thursday night when it commenced raining, and rousing himself up he started to look for his coat and got upon the edge table, and being hardly awake, walked up on the edge saw, which cut a deep gash in his right heel and cut part of his left foot nearly off, running from toe to heel, in the twinkling of an eye. He was taken to his home on Capt. Waleutt's place, and Dr. Hume sent for, who dressed his wounds, and thinks he can save both of his feet.

Mr. Geo. W. Crumbaugh died at his father's residence, in this city, Monday night, of consumption. He was a soldier in the late war, being a member of Capt. Gray's company, of the 22d Kentucky Infantry, and served faithfully nearly four years. Since the war he made his home in this city, but has lived in the various towns and cities in this part of the State and had many friends in each, who will regret to hear of his death. He was a kind-hearted man, being especially fond of children, with whom he was a great favorite. It was a pleasure to him to accommodate his friends in any way he could, and was ever ready with a jest, which made him a great favorite. His funeral took place from the family residence at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

They were from the vicinity of "up country somewhere," and had come in to see the circus. She leaned lovingly on his arm as they walked down Market street, watching the unloading of the circus wagons from the train until they came to the car containing the elephants. The keeper was standing in the door, and just as the couple arrived opposite one of the elephants poked its head out, rubbing against the keeper, when she clasped his arm convulsively, saying, "I wouldn't have you in thar for anything." "I ain't afraid to go in thar," said he, "and if you was in thar I'd go right in and fetch you out." Later in the day they were seen following the old clown in the pony wagon in the wake of the grand parade, their countenances beaming with genuine happiness.

Wednesday afternoon Clamp O'Nan, a character well known to saloonists of this city, entered the hardware establishment of J. H. Bowen & Co. and asked Joe Ware, a negro man who makes himself useful about that house, to go out and take a drink. Ware refused, O'Nan took umbrage at the incivility of his dusky friend, and pulling a pistol from his pocket, shot him twice, both bullets taking effect in the right leg, just below the groin. The bullets were of a small size, and the injuries sustained are not of a serious nature.

Mr. N. W. Casey, of New Orleans, and Dr. Thos. L. Taylor, of this city, have purchased the Capital Hotel from Alfred Harris' heirs, paying therefor $23,500. The house was built by the city in 1853, at a cost of about $130,000, and was run by it on the lessee plan until 1864, when it was sold to Mr. J. B. Aiken for $20,000, who ran it several years and sold it to Messrs. Gray & Saffell for $32,000, furniture and stores included, and they in turn sold it to Alfred Harris for $40,000, who leased it to Capt. McGill and Mr. Campbell Steele, and since his death his heirs leased it to Mr. F. B. McLean, who will in a short time turn it over to the new purchasers. It will be refitted and greatly improved, and it is hoped may prove a profitable investment to the new firm. We are glad that by this trade Dr. Taylor will be kept in Frankfort.

Dryden's Minstrels drew a good audience at Major Opera House Tuesday night, who were well repaid for turning out such a warm evening. The performance was in the main much better than many professional troupes have given here, and all of the boys did their parts well. The solos of Messrs. Bob Franklin and Duke Smith in the first part were especially well rendered, and the choruses were good. The jokes were mostly fresh and well gotten off by Messrs. Frank Hutchison and Pat. Newman on the ends. To have seen the pin hook students would have made the most sober-sided citizen laugh himself sick. Bob Franklin's sermon was well delivered, and Messrs. M. J. Foley and Pat. Newman in their Irish specialty won applause. Frank Hutchison was somewhat of a show in himself, and has improved considerably since his last appearance before a Frankfort audience. He never failed of an encore whenever he appeared on the stage. One of the best things of the show was the prompt manner in which quotations from Pinatore were punished. The offender was shot upon the spot. The music was furnished by South's orchestra, and was very good.

WEEKLY ROUNDABOUT.

FRANKFORT, SEPTEMBER 4, 1880.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN CITY AND COUNTY.

There will be a wedding in Belle Point next week.

Two hops will be given at the Capital Hotel during the fair, one on the 21st and the other on the 24th.

A large number of citizens of this city and county have been attending the Lexington Fair this week.

Mr. R. Eb. Gaines has resigned as school trustee in Belle Point, and Dr. J. J. Wilson has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

The largest crowd that has been in Frankfort for a long time was on our streets Wednesday to see the circus parade.

Messrs. John Gault & Co. commenced burning a large kiln of brick on their South Frankfort yard the first of this week.

Messrs. Burns & Eichorn are erecting a building at the intersection of Main and High streets which they will use as a carriage factory.

Messrs. Burton & Kincaid have sold the Anderson News to Mr. G. Allison Holland, of the Eminence Constitutionalist, who has taken charge of that paper.

Mr. V. Berberich's new stock of cloths and cassimines for suiting is splendid. Stop in and examine it before you purchase and you cannot fail to find something to suit.

The session of Kentucky Eclectic Institute commences next Monday, September 6th. It is desired that all children who expect to enter school at that institution for the coming session will be on hand promptly.

The new court for Franklin county, the Franklin Court of Common Pleas, Hon. C. S. French, Presiding, will convene on the first Monday in November next. Lawyers, will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly.

The City School opens next Monday morning, and all the little girls and boys who expect to attend that school the present year must be on hand promptly at 8 o'clock. A full corps of teachers have been engaged, and the school will be fully up to its average heretofore.

The following are the officers of the Franklin, Scott and Woodford Colored Fair Association:

President—Wm. Crampton, Franklin.
Vice Presidents—Thos. Monroe, of Scott, and Oliver Brown, of Woodford.

Treasurer—Anderson Rice, Franklin.
Secretary—Wm. B. Luckett, Franklin.

The fair will commence on the 28th of September and continue four days.

Capt. Sanford Goin, who has been employed at Lock No. 3, as a superintendent of the work, is at home on a furlough, having been so unfortunate as to fall while walking on the dam and break one of the bones of his left arm between the shoulder and elbow, and dislocated his shoulder. He reports the work progressing on the dam very satisfactorily, and says there is no mistake about the work being completed by cold weather.

Dr. W. L. Crutcher reports that during his stay of several weeks in Maine he never saw a drunken man, nor heard an oath nor a word of profane language used. Let us have a total prohibition of the liquor traffic in Kentucky, and in a few years such a state of affairs will exist here.

Thirty-three years ago Mr. Wm. McEwan had a saw-mill at the mouth of Benson with a track running down to the creek. Last Saturday, in making the excavation for the foundation of the north pier of the bridge, a portion of the track was found ten feet beneath the surface, and was recognized by Mr. McEwan. It is not many men who can make a track in the mud and recognize it so long afterwards.

A man considerably under the influence of stagger juice amused himself and a large number of boys, Monday afternoon, by standing at Mrs. Mandiehr's fruit stand, on Market street, buying watermelons, pitching them up and letting them drop on the pavement to see them squash. He had demolished eight in this way when Officer Rupe came up and objected to the sidewalk being worn out in that way, and then the fun stopped.

The Paris Fair, the oldest in the State, commences next Tuesday, September 7th, and continues four days. The Kentucky Central Railroad will sell round trip tickets from Lexington at fifty cents. Persons desiring to attend the fair from this city can take the 9:07 train from Louisville, and make connection with the 1:40 train on the Central at Lexington and arrive at the Fair Ground at 2:24 in the afternoon. The best display of fine stock to be seen at any fair in the State is at Paris, and it is one of the few fairs that has no races in connection with it.

Considerable rivalry has existed for some time between the sawyers of the different saw-mills in this city with regard to the speed they could make with their saws. The sawyer at Rodman & Sneed's mill stated several days ago to some of Mr. J. M. Wakefield's hands that he could saw 7,000 feet of lumber in two hours. This statement was doubted by the sawyer and settee at Wakefield's and they offered to bet that he could not do it. Several notes passed between the two sawyers until Thursday morning a rather insulting note was written by Wakefield's man, which brought the sawyer and hands from Rodman & Sneed's mill over to see about it. During the quarrel between the two sawyers the hands of each mill gathered around and took sides with their respective sawyers and it looked very much as if a big row was going to take place when Messrs. Rodman & Sneed appeared on the ground and persuaded their hands to drop the matter and return to their work.

WEEKLY ROUNDABOUT.

Services at the Baptist church every evening at 7½ o'clock. Every body invited.

Hon. John D. White will speak at the court-house in this city on Tuesday night, next.

Mrs. Walker has also entered suit against Mr. Geo. Berry for $10,000 damages for assaulting her.

Jeff Allen has quit the Capital Hotel, and all orders intended for him should be left at Dr. W. H. Averill's drug store.

Officer John W. Rupe says there have not been so many people in town as there was on Wednesday since the day Daniel Boone was buried.

Dryden's Minstrels propose to visit the neighboring towns and give exhibitions in a few weeks. They will visit Eminence during the fair and then go to Harrodsburg, Danville and other places.

A freight engine ran off the track in front of Meriewether's Hotel Tuesday afternoon and remained off four hours. The evening train from Louisville was delayed here on account of it until after 7 o'clock.

Messrs. Hord & Trabue and Jas. Andrew Scott have removed their law offices to the rooms in the upper part of the court-house, Judge James having determined to remodel the building in which they were located, on St. Clair street.

A little three year old boy went to the circus Wednesday afternoon, with his parents, and when one of the women came out to ride he saw what a scarcity of clothing she had on, he gave it as his opinion that she would "tetch told."

Miss Maggie Russell will shortly begin the erection of a frame residence on the lot she purchased from Col. Reynolds, similar to the one now being erected on the adjoining lot by Dr. Williams. Messrs. Wakefield & Choat have the contract.

Col. D. Howard Smith has purchased a farm of 161 acres between Eminence and New Castle, in Henry county, three miles from the former and one mile from the latter, place, for which he paid $9,500. He will take possession and remove his family there about the first of October.

A log was sawed up at Wakefield's mill Tuesday morning out of which fifteen bullets were cut. They were of all sizes, from a small pistol bullet to a minie ball. It is not known whether the log was cut near any of the battle grounds in the Mountains or the tree of which it was a part had been used for target practice.

The sad news reached this city Wednesday night that Mr. James G. Arnold, of this city, had been killed at Dodge City, Kansas. It seems that he had a difficulty with a negro man, in which the negro shot him.

Jim Arnold was a young man of more than ordinary ability, and had a host of friends in this city. He was pleasant in his manner, moved by noble impulses, brave to a fault, and fair and generous in all his dealings. He will be sincerely mourned in this city by many besides his immediate family. The remains are expected to arrive in this city to-day.

Hermitage distillery was the scene of a little "carving" Wednesday afternoon. Two employees, Ben Taylor and James Fleming, engaged in a friendly dispute. They waxed warm, assumed a belligerent attitude, and applying the war paint, determined to appeal to the law of muscle to settle the dispute. In the fracas Fleming cut Taylor, but the wound is not of a dangerous character.

A man by the name of R. F. Owens, hailing from Louisville, was picked up on the street near the depot Thursday night in a semi-unconscious condition and carried to Kaltenbrun's boarding house on High street, where he died shortly afterwards. It was at first thought that he was poisoned, but a post mortem examination by Drs. W. H. Phythian, J. L. Price and Samuel James revealed the fact that his death was produced by concussion of the brain, caused by a fall or a blow on the head. An inquest was held yesterday afternoon and a verdict rendered in accordance with the above facts. Owens is said to have recently buried his entire family in Louisville. He was a day laborer here, in the employ of Mr. Ned Lillis.

Sells Brothers' Circus, one of the best on the road, gave two exhibitions in this city Wednesday to immense audiences, the tent being crowded, both afternoon and evening, to suffocation. The exhibition was much the same as given by all circuses, but the acrobats were just one notch above any that have ever been seen in this city. The pair of hippopotami in the ring was also a novel sight. The trained cattle did not come quite up to the expectations of many, but to those who know how difficult it is to teach an ox anything their performance was very remarkable, and we venture the prediction that Mr. Cobb will, before another season, have them so completely trained to do his bidding that they will astonish the amusement loving public.

One of the best features of the show was the absence of that everlasting nuisance the peanut vender, who always comes at the wrong time to annoy and importune, and one could enjoy the performance without being worried by him.

Messrs. Sells have a good show and as long as they employ such gentlemanly agents as Messrs. Chas. Stowe and Willis Cobb they will merit their great success.

Cheerfulness, courage, and great activity of intellect are engendered by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, and its capacity of imparting power of endurance to the brain and nervous system, is shown in its property of sustaining persons through mental difficulties.
